TAXES & WITHHOLDING INFORMATION

Taxes & Withholding: The benefit is not considered taxable income for most eligible employees. However, if your child does not qualify as a dependent in accordance with IRS rules and regulations, then the benefit will be considered taxable income to you.

If your child is not a dependent, as defined by IRS regulations, your child may still receive the benefit, and the benefit will then be taxable to you. The University is required to withhold federal, state, and county income taxes in addition to Social Security (FICA and Medicare) taxes on such taxable fringe benefits. Generally, this will result in tax withholding of 25-40% of the tuition benefit amount. You should consult with your financial advisor to determine if additional estimated income taxes may be required.

The withholding on your taxable tuition benefit will occur towards the end of each semester and the Payroll Department will contact you about the timing and the amount of this taxable benefit.

For more detailed information on dependents, you may refer to IRS Publication 501 or IRS Publication 504 (for divorced or separated individuals). For purposes of the qualified tuition reduction, a dependent child of divorced parents is treated as the dependent of both parents (see IRS Publication 970). If you have additional questions, you may also want to consult with your own tax advisor.

If the faculty, staff or retiree associated with this benefit is deceased, the student may be responsible for any taxes incurred based on Internal Revenue Service parameters.

What's a dependent?

IRS Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deductions, and Filing Information (<http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/p501.pdf>) defines dependents in great detail.

In general, a dependent child is a U.S. citizen, national, or resident alien who is not married and who cannot be claimed as a dependent on someone else's return. In addition, a dependent child, under "Qualified Dependent" definition, must:

- Be under age 19 at the end of the calendar year OR be under age 24 at the end of the calendar year in which the benefit is used and a student OR be permanently and totally disabled,
- Not provide over half of his or her own support,
- And live with the taxpayer for more than half of the year. Temporary absences such as time living at college counts as living with the taxpayer.

See policy document for more information on dependent qualifications. If you have additional questions, your individual tax preparer can help determine if your child is a dependent.

For purposes of the qualified tuition reduction, a dependent child of divorced parents is treated as the dependent of both parents.
